Part I Reading Comprehension (阅读理解, 40 分, 20×2)

Passage One

Trees are close companions in our daily life. Although they cannot speak, we can still connect with them by hugging and observing them.

As we step into a summer filled with greenery, many people are excited to embrace nature. The trend of tree-hugging therapy has once again made waves on social media. Those who have tried "tree hugging" say it can ease stress and anxiety and help people give it a heartfelt hug. The practice is quite simple: step outside, find a park, find a tree that catches your eye, open your arms, hug it and quietly feel the connection.

But does "tree hugging" really have such magical effects? The answer is: yes! Research shows that spending some time each day hugging a tree can indeed lower stress, lift your mood, boost immunity, and even change your brain chemistry to make you feel happier. Tree hugging helps increase the level of oxytocin. There's actually quite a lot you can do. You can study a tree by examining the bark's texture and color and searching for things. Pores on the trunk that allow the tree to "breathe". You can tell single leaves from compound leaves, observe the shape, edges, tips and veins of the leaves, and even touch and smell them. If you come across a tree in bloom, you can examine the flower's shape, color, scent and structure to help quickly identify the species. You can also engage with a tree's life story. You can feel the passage of time by placing your hand on the trunk with your eyes closed, or sense the flow of energy within by pressing your ear against the bark.

Directions: There are 4 passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or incomplete sentences. For each of them there are 4 choices marked A, B, C and D. You should decide on the best choice and mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet.

Passage Two

In late March, 22-year-old Wu Miao finished her volunteer service with the World Food Programme (WFP) in Bolivia, a country in South America.

"I've always been passionate about volunteering and want to make a positive impact," Wu explained. She studied the UN's structure and the WFP's mission, taught herself basic Spanish and learned about Bolivia's history, environment and culture. Her hard work paid off, and she was finally accepted into the program.

After arriving in La Paz, Bolivia, the world's highest capital city, Wu had trouble with altitude sickness (高原反应). She also found it hard to get used to the local food, so she upset her stomach.

Despite these challenges, Wu quickly adjusted to the new environment. When heavy rainfall caused landslides, she acted quickly in her role as a resource mobilization assistant with the WFP. "I hurried to the disaster front line and helped distribute WFP relief supplies to families, ensuring they received food and other essential aid," she recalled. She also used her photojournalism skills from university to film interviews for WFP's social media. Besides volunteering, cultural exchange was an important part of Wu's experience in Bolivia. She shared Chinese food with local people and other volunteers, teaching them how to use chopsticks and cooking her favorite dishes. On International Volunteer Day 2024, Wu and her fellow volunteers discussed the responsibilities and challenges of their work. "Despite coming from different countries, we are all united by the same belief: the desire to help and serve others," Wu said.

Passage Three

Do you want a phone that looks like your school lunch card? It seems like a lot of students are interested in getting one or making it themselves. It all started with a video on Xiaohongshu where an 18-year-old high school student called Liu Yiyang from Guangdong shared his cool invention. Many people wanted to buy it from him or asked for a tutorial.

Liu has designed both hardware and software. One of his inventions is an app called "Sam", which is also Liu's English name. "The app keeps the tools I often use in one place, like my browser, environmental noise monitoring, QR code generation," he said. So far, a lot of people have downloaded the app.

The idea of a canteen card phone wasn't his original idea. The concept was already popular on the internet. "Seeing that everyone was asking for a tutorial, I made one myself and shared a video on my Xiaohongshu," Liu said. However, Liu realized that the idea could also have a bad influence on young people. He once talked to a primary school student on WeChat who planned to use a lunch card phone at school, hoping his teachers wouldn't realize it. "I cancelled all the orders," Liu said, "Now I only keep the phones I have already made as a reminder of my work."

This situation made Liu reflect on the role of technology, which he believes is a double-edged sword. "As innovators, we should consider the negative impacts of what we create, and my lunch card phone is a good example of that," Liu said. Now, Liu is working on a patent that he hopes can help the medical industry. He wants to make the world a more convenient place through his original products.

Passage Four

In a city where East meets West on dining plates, Shanghai has launched a yearlong celebration of international cuisine, Global Taste in Shanghai, positioning itself as one of the world's premier culinary (烹饪) destinations. The festival kicked off this month, representing a move to showcase Shanghai's rich and diverse international dining scene and fusion of flavors and cultural intersections. The city currently boasts nearly 10,000 restaurants representing 43 countries and regions across five continents. Global cuisine is not just a carrier of city culture, but is also a universal language for international exchange that transcends borders and speaks directly to hearts. The concentration of global cuisines is a unique charm of Shanghai, and systematically enhancing its influence is of strategic significance.

The story of Shanghai's international dining scene is perhaps best told through its restaurateurs, who have witnessed and shaped the city's gastronomic (美食文化) evolution.

John Liu, the Chinese-American founder of the restaurant Scarpetta Trattoria, has lived this transformation. "When we first opened nearly 14 years ago, high-level international restaurants were not as common, and expatriates (外籍工作人员) dominated our customer base," Liu recalled. "Today, 80 to 90 percent of our clientele

Mark A (for TRUE) if the statement agrees with the information given in the passage; mark B (for FALSE) if the statement contradicts the information given in the passage. You should make your judgment and mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet.

In Xi'an Chanba International Port, Xi'an people can enjoy noodles made from Kazakhstan flour. And at Zhengzhou East Railway Station, Henan people can buy German milk, French wine and Italian coffee beans. All these products are available thanks to the China-Europe freight trains. On November 28, 2023, the X8086 China-Europe freight train left Chengdu for Malaszewice, Poland, marking the 120,000th journey of these amazing trains.

China-Europe freight train operations began in March 2011. Two years later, after the Belt and Road Initiative started, the train service grew quickly.

A large logistics (物流) network has now been set up. The Chinese cities involved have grown from only a few to 128, connecting with 232 cities in 26 European countries and over 100 cities in 11 Asian countries. This steel network has opened new paths for inland areas that are neither coastal nor close to other countries, covering the whole Eurasian continent.

The 120,000 train trips have carried over 50,000 types of goods. At first, they carried mainly light industrial products, but now high-value goods such as cars, machinery and electronics are their main exports.

A technology company from Chengdu supplies smart meters to power companies in Europe. In the past, it took 60 days to ship the products by sea. Now thanks to freight trains, it takes only about 30 days. Also, as more trains are running, transportation costs have fallen by more than 40 percent, uniting communities. Meanwhile, the trains have greatly changed the regions. For example, Chongqing's export business grows by 30 percent each year and Xi'an has become a major electronics hub (中心).

In Europe, Malaszewice has become a key logistics center, and 20,000 new jobs have been created in Duisburg, Germany. China-Europe freight trains go beyond transporting goods, connecting the world and uniting communities. They offer stable, efficient, low-cost logistics solutions as global logistics costs rise and supply chain issues increase for businesses.

参考范文 (非官方, 仅供参考) (以下范文由编者依题目材料与要求撰写, 仅供参考, 非官方标准答案, 亦非任何机构公布的范文。) How to Achieve Balanced AI Usage In the digital age, some people overuse AI while others ignore its benefits. Striking a balance is key. Balanced AI usage means using it as a tool, not a crutch. For example, students can use AI to generate ideas or check grammar, but should write essays themselves to develop critical thinking. In healthcare, doctors may use AI for initial diagnosis, but final decisions must rely on human expertise. To achieve this, we need digital literacy. Schools should teach responsible AI use, and individuals should set boundaries, letting AI handle repetitive tasks while engaging deeply in creative and ethical work. Ultimately, balance lies in knowing when to leverage technology and when to trust our own judgment.
